Volume 29, Number 2    July 2014

Editors’ Note

Articles

Civility’s Footprint: Ethnographic Conversations about Urban Civility and Sustainability in Ho Chi Minh City
Erik Harms 223

Phantom Scandal: On the National Uses of the “Thailand Controversy”
Hjorleifur Jonsson 263

Writing a Singular Past: Mon History and “Modern” Historiography in Burma
Patrick McCormick 300

Building a Human Border: The Thai Border Patrol Police School Project in the Post–Cold War Era
Sinae Hyun 332

Local Political Elites in Indonesia: “Risers” and “Holdovers”
Nankyung Choi 364

“Authenticity” and “Foreign Talent” in Singapore: The Relative and Negative Logic of National Identity
Peidong Yang 408

Research Note

Singapore’s Balancing Act, from the Perspective of the Linguistic Landscape
Peter K.W. Tan 438
SOJOURN Symposium

Being and Becoming Kachin: Histories Beyond the State in the Borderworlds of Burma
Nicholas Farrelly, La Raw Maran and Mandy Sadan

Book Reviews

Interactions with a Violent Past: Reading Post-Conflict Landscapes in Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam, edited by Vatthana Pholsena and Oliver Tappe.
Martin Stuart-Fox

Violence and Vengeance: Religious Conflict and its Aftermath in Eastern Indonesia, by Christopher R. Duncan.
Shane J. Barter

Conflict and Conversion: Catholicism in Southeast Asia, 1500–1700, by Tara Alberts.
Michael Pearson

Gambling with the Land: The Contemporary Evolution of Southeast Asian Agriculture, by Rodolphe De Koninck and Jean-François Rousseau.
Michael J. Montesano

Contemporary Islamic Discourse in the Malay-Indonesian World: Critical Perspectives, by Azhar Ibrahim.
Noor Aisha Abdul Rahman

Sébastien Penmellen Boret

Norshahril Saat

Rice Talks: Food and Community in a Vietnamese Town, by Nir Avieli.
Najma Rizvi
SOJOURN Editorial Committee

Chairperson: Ooi Kee Beng (ISEAS)
Managing Editor: Michael J. Montesano (ISEAS)
Editors: Terence Chong (ISEAS), Hui Yew-Foong (ISEAS),
        Lee Hock Guan (ISEAS),
        Thomas B. Pepinsky (Cornell), Andrew C. Willford (Cornell)
Book Review Editor: Benjamin Loh (ISEAS)
         Editorial Assistant: Gerard Wong (ISEAS)
         Production Editor: Stephen Logan (ISEAS)

International Advisory Committee

Barbara Andaya (University of Hawai‘i at Manoa, United States)
Mary Callahan (University of Washington at Seattle, United States)
Thak Chaloemtiarana (Cornell University, United States)
Terence Gomez (University of Malaya, Malaysia)
Christopher Goscha (Université du Québec à Montréal, Canada)
Caroline Hau (Kyoto University, Japan)
Ariel Heryanto (The Australian National University, Australia)
Shirlena Huang (National University of Singapore, Singapore)
Ben Kerkvliet (The Australian National University, Australia)
Victor T. King (University of Leeds, United Kingdom; Universiti Brunei Darussalam, Brunei)
Kwok Kian Woon (Nanyang Technological University, Singapore)
Takashi Shiraiishi (Institute of Developing Economies – Japan External Trade Organization, Japan)
Editors’ Note

With articles treating Vietnam, Laos, Myanmar, Thailand, Indonesia and Singapore, this edition of SOJOURN presents research on an exceptionally broad swathe of the region. It also introduces a major new feature of the journal, SOJOURN Symposium.

The work of two talented ethnographers in the prime of their careers launches the issue. An article by Erik Harms, recipient of the 2014 Benda Prize of the Association for Asian Studies for his book on the outlying Ho Chi Minh City district of Hóc Môn, draws on his ongoing research on that same city’s planned New Urban Zone of Phú Mỹ Hưng. It explores the relationship between Vietnamese notions of civility and questions of urban sustainability with relevance across Southeast Asia and beyond. Hjorleifur Jonsson revisits the controversy over the alleged role of American anthropologists in Thai counterinsurgency, which bitterly divided the American Anthropological Association in the early 1970s. He provocatively and revealingly relates the way that that controversy unfolded to a witchcraft scare that broke out during the Second Indochina War among the Iu Mien of Laos, the group that is the focus of his most recent book.

The article by Patrick McCormick of the Ecole française d’Extrême-Orient in Yangon examines the various influences that have shaped the modern practice of Mon historical scholarship. It argues that these influences help explain both the anachronistic understanding of ethnic relations in Myanmar history and the discomfort with competing historical interpretations that characterize that scholarship. Sinae Hyun’s contribution to this edition of SOJOURN forms part of her large project on Thailand’s paramilitary Border Patrol Police (BPP). Focusing on the schools established by the BPP to serve members of highland minority groups in northern Thailand and thus to create a “human border” for the country during the Cold War, her article suggests the diminished effectiveness of that continuing project of national consolidation in the post–Cold War era.

Nan-kyung Choi’s study of the life stories and career paths of politicians active in Pontianak, West Kalimantan, charts the broadening of post-Soeharto Indonesia’s political class. It tempers its treatment of that encouraging development in “middle Indonesia” by noting the important roles of money politics and patrimonialism in the emergence of the country’s new provincial elites. Addressing the much discussed matter of recent immigration to Singapore, Peidong Yang explores Singaporean attitudes towards athletes and students from China to propose the emergence of a Singaporean national identity grounded in notions of inauthenticity and in a “relative and negative” logic. Also focused on Singapore, Peter Tan’s research note uses a study of signboards to explore the country’s “geosemiotics”. His analysis of the interaction of state language policy and the determinants of language status suggests questions to motivate further research not only in Singapore but also on other parts of the region.

Conceptualized and spearheaded by Book Review Editor Benjamin Loh, SOJOURN Symposium makes its debut in this issue of the journal. Intended to foster critical discussion of the most important new scholarship on Southeast Asia and thus to complement traditional research articles and book reviews, SOJOURN Symposium will henceforth be a regular feature of the journal. We will invite, typically, two scholars to write review essays on a recently published monograph and then ask the author of the monograph to respond to those essays. We will urge reviewers to use their essays to evaluate the work under review in its broadest possible context and thus to stimulate further discussion of that work both among specialists in the field in question and among the broader community of Southeast Asianists.

We are particularly pleased to launch this new feature of SOJOURN with a discussion of Mandy Sadan’s monumental new work, Being and Becoming Kachin: Histories Beyond the State in the Borderworlds of Burma, and to publish reviews of this work by Nicholas Farrelly and La Raw Maran. Through rigorous ethnography and the use of a dazzling range of sources, Sadan’s book explores the social and cultural dynamics of Kachin ethno-nationalism and speaks at the same time to debates about materiality among anthropologists and historians. As Sadan remarks in her response to our two reviewers, “The physical, the material, the visible in history has a tangible importance in the communities in which I research, which have until recently been largely overlooked as sites of serious historical exploration.”

Further, Sadan’s scholarship offers an extraordinarily thoughtful and boldly conceived history of an important Southeast Asian “borderworld” at a time in the evolution of scholarship on the region when the importance and nature of borders — intellectual, ideological, physical, ethnic, social, cultural and other — have never merited more attention but when the study of borders seems often to recycle predictable themes and tropes.

We hope that this inaugural SOJOURN Symposium sets an example for those to follow, not least in enabling the journal to push research on Southeast Asia well beyond its current borderworlds.

Terence Chong
Benjamin Loh
Michael Montesano

REFERENCES

