Asia Pacific Viewpoint

Edited by Dr Philip Morrison, Dr Roger Lawrence, Dr John McKinnon, Professor Paul Mosley, Sara Kindon and Richard Willis

Asia Pacific Viewpoint is an international journal focusing on the fields of geography and its allied disciplines and and reports on research in East and South East Asia, as well as the Pacific region.

The journal includes papers dealing with four main areas of scholarly debate including: the links between countries within the Asia Pacific region, including international investment, migration, and political and economic co-operation; the environmental consequences of agriculture, industrial and service growth, and resource developments; first hand field work into rural, industrial, and urban developments; papers which demonstrate the utility of concepts and frameworks to the understanding of development patterns within the region.

Pacifica Review endeavours to make sense of a rapidly transforming world and its primary focus is peace, security and global change. It brings together the perspectives of leading scholars and practitioners from around the world, and particularly from the Asia Pacific. It was launched in the context of the profound and diverse nature of contemporary global change which raises difficult practical and theoretical questions cutting across disciplinary boundaries. By cultivating a multidisciplinary perspective, Pacifica Review aims to establish connections between the local, national, and international and transnational levels of organisation and between the social, economic and geopolitical dimensions of contemporary change. It provides a forum for normative, analytical and empirical approaches to the study of peace and security.
