Introduction

This special issue of the journal with its focus on "Leadership Succession and Security in Southeast Asia" is the outcome of the second year of research conducted under the "Leadership and Security in Southeast Asia" project at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies. The original papers were discussed in some detail at a workshop held in Bangkok, Thailand, on 6–7 March 1989, and Dr Yong Mun Cheong was then appointed as Guest Editor to produce this special focus issue. The project itself had earlier dealt with the question of leadership perceptions of security and how national security was managed in Southeast Asia. It has since moved on to looking into the institutional aspects of the linkages between leadership and security. The research that is currently being undertaken on this subject will also be disseminated in the near future. However, the currency of succession issues in the politics of the region deemed it fit to publish these papers without delay and the journal serves this purpose admirably.

Contemporary Southeast Asia is a journal that specializes in the politics, international relations and security-related issues of Southeast Asia and its wider geostrategic environment. Although it was originally conceived as a more general journal of the social sciences in 1979, CSEA has come to focus more closely on the concerns of the Institute's Regional Strategic Studies Programme since 1987. Apart from serving as a reliable and up-to-date source of information on various events and trends in regional politics, international relations and security questions that affect Southeast Asia, CSEA also publishes the results of original research on these subjects by both scholars and other interested persons.

Contemporary Southeast Asia is published quarterly in June, September, December and March by the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies.
