

About The Author

Christopher Roberts is a Lecturer in International Relations and Asian Studies at the Faculty of Business and Government, University of Canberra. He is also a Visiting Fellow at the University of New South Wales (ADFA campus). He was previously a post-doctoral fellow at the S. Rajaratnam School of International Relations (RSIS) in Singapore and has held visiting appointments at both RSIS and the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS). Supervised by Professor James Cotton at UNSW at ADFA, he completed a Ph.D. on ASEAN's pursuit of a security community in 2007. Thanks to a number of research grants — including the Australian Government's Endeavour Australia Cheung Kong Award — together with his work for organizations such as the ASEAN Secretariat and Friedrich Ebert Stiftung, the author has conducted more than thirty field trips to all ten of the ASEAN countries.

The author has published several book chapters, journal articles and commentaries on issues ranging from international relations theory to ASEAN and regional security issues, in areas such as the South China Sea and Myanmar. Aside from Myanmar, his current research interests include the Indochina countries and the challenges of transnational crime. From an international relations perspective, he has also been investigating the role of values and norms in the emergence of greater cooperation, institutionalization and peace among the ASEAN nations.
