

Reproduced from The U.S.-Singapore Free Trade Agreement: An American Perspective on Power, Trade, and Security in the Asia Pacific by Eul-Soo Pang (Singapore: Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, 2011). This version was obtained electronically direct from the publisher on condition that copyright is not infringed. No part of this publication may be reproduced without the prior permission of the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies. Individual articles are available at < <http://bookshop.iseas.edu.sg> >

About the Author

Eul-Soo Pang is a Visiting Professorial Fellow at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore. He is Professor Emeritus in international political economy and history, Colorado School of Mines, Golden, Colorado. Receiving his Ph.D. in Latin American history (Berkeley), his interests have branched out into comparative political economy, in particular, trade and security issues for Latin America and East Asia. He has held several research fellowships (the Doherty Foundation, Social Science Research Council, National Endowment for the Humanities, and the American Philosophical Society). He also received two Fulbright visiting professorships (to Brazil and Malaysia) and on several occasions worked with a Department of State speakers' program on international political economy and security issues, touring Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Guyana, Honduras, Paraguay, Suriname, and Trinidad and Tobago. Between 2000 and 2007 (eight consecutive summers), Pang was a visiting professor at the Institute of Diplomacy and Foreign Relations in Kuala Lumpur, then a department of Malaysia's Office of the Prime Minister, teaching international political economy. He has published four books and some sixty book chapters and articles. His current research interest is the power shift and newly emerging paradigm of economy and security in the greater Asia-Pacific world-system in the Indian Ocean, South China Sea, and Western Pacific. He is currently completing a book on United States foreign policy toward Southeast Asia since the end of the Vietnam War.