About the Author

Ippei Yamazawa received his doctorate in economics from Hitotsubashi University, Tokyo, where he is now Professor Emeritus. He has served as President, International University of Japan (2003–6) and President, Institute of Developing Economies/JETRO (1998–2003). He has been a regular participant in the Pacific Trade and Development Conference (until 1999) and the Pacific Economic Cooperation Conference (until 2003). He was a member of the APEC Eminent Persons Group (1993–95), coordinator of the APEC Study Center Japan Consortium (1995–present), and consultant for the APEC IAP peer review process (on Australia, 2002–3). His books include APEC: Challenges and Tasks in the Twenty-First Century (ed.) (Routledge, 2000) and Japan-ASEAN Comprehensive Economic Partnership: Vision and Agenda (IDE/JETRO, 2003). He received the Foreign Minister's commendation for his long-time contribution to PECC and APEC.
