

THE AUTHORS

H. Osman-Rani, Associate Professor of Economics at Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia, received his M.A. in 1974 and Ph.D. in 1977 from the University of the Philippines. He served as Dean of the Faculty of Economics, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia in 1982–84. He has published several articles relating mainly to industrial development; his most recent book (co-edited with E.K. Fisk) is The Political Economy of Malaysia (1982).

Toh Kin Woon, Ph.D. (University of Malaya), is currently Associate Professor at the Faculty of Economics, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. He has served as a Joint Honorary Research Fellow under the Commonwealth Academic Staff Fellowship at the Department of Economics and the Institute of Local Government, University of Birmingham, England, and as a visiting lecturer and researcher at the University of Sydney, Australia. He has also served as a consultant to the FAO and ESCAP, and has written many papers on development issues such as the role of the state, public enterprises, and manpower.

Anuwar Ali, is presently Associate Professor at the Faculty of Economics, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia. He received his Ph.D. from the University of Kent, Canterbury, England in 1982, and has been actively involved in research projects and writing papers especially on matters relating to manpower and industrialization. He was one of the UNIDO experts responsible for the recently announced Industrial Master Plan of Malaysia.