

Contributors

Chia Siow Yue is an Associate Professor in Economics at the National University of Singapore. Her main research interests are in the field of international economics and development economics. She has written and published extensively on regional economic co-operation, trade, industrialization, and foreign investment, with particular emphasis on Singapore, ASEAN, and the Pacific Basin. She has also served as economic and research consultant to various international and regional organizations.

Ida N. Hasni is a Research Associate at the Center for Policy and Implementation Studies, a semi-government research institution. She is also a Lecturer at the Faculty of Economics, University of Indonesia.

Rolf J. Langhammer is Research Division Chief at the Kiel Institute of World Economics and a Lecturer at Kiel University. He has written extensively on international trade patterns, trade policies, and economic integration, and has acted as consultant to national and international institutions.

Thomas Lilienbecker is a Lecturer in the Department of Economics, University of Bochum, Federal Republic of Germany.

Dermot McAleese is Whately Professor of Political Economy at Trinity College, Dublin. He has written on the external trade policy of the European Community and problems of European integration and acted as consultant to the European Commission, the Organization of Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD), the World Bank, and the Irish Government.

Mari Pangestu is a Lecturer at the Faculty of Economics, University of Indonesia, and Head at the Department of Economics, Centre for Strategic and International Studies (CSIS), Jakarta.

Jacques Pelkmans is a Senior Research Fellow at the Centre of European Policy Studies (CEPS) in Brussels and the Director of Euroscope, a bureau for international economic analysis and consultancy for international business. Before 1990 he was Professor of Economics at the European Institute of Public Administration, Maastricht, and, among others, a co-organizer of its EC-ASEAN programme. He has published widely on economic integration, EC-1992, trade policies, foreign direct investment, and international business.

Gerhard Schmitt-Rink is a Professor in the Department of Economics, University of Bochum, Federal Republic of Germany.

Alfred Steinherr is Professor of Economics at Université Catholique de Louvain, and Director for Financial Research of the European Investment Bank, Luxembourg. He held previous appointments in the International Monetary Fund, Washington, and the European Commission, Brussels. He has published extensively in the areas of international trade and finance.

Suthiphand Chirathivat is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics, Kasetsart University. His research work concentrates mainly on international trade and finance within the context of ASEAN experiences in relation to other major economic players. He was a former adviser to the House Economic Affairs Committee, the Parliament, and contributed to other national and international institutions.

Tanasak Wahawisan is a Research Fellow at the Industry, Trade, and International Economic Relations Program, Thailand Development Research Institute. His extensive research works focus mainly on Asia-Pacific regional co-operation.

Norbert Wagner was an adviser and a Visiting Fellow at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore, and a Representative of the Konrad Adenauer Foundation, Federal Republic of Germany. He is on leave from the Department of Economics, South Asia Institute, Heidelberg University. His research interests focus on international and development economics.

Wong Poh Kam is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Business Policy, Faculty of Business Administration, National University of Singapore. Prior to his present position, he headed a private research and consultancy firm in Malaysia for several years and conducted various economic studies for national government and international institutions, including the United Nations Industrial Development Organization (Unido), United Nations Centre on Transnational Corporations (UNCTC), and the Asian Development Bank (ADB). His current research interests are in industry and competitive strategy analysis, and the economics of technology.