

The Author

INGO WALTER is the Charles Simon Professor of Applied Financial Economics at the Stern School of Business, New York University. He also serves as Director of the New York University Salomon Center, an independent academic research institute founded in 1972 to focus on financial institutions, instruments and markets. He also holds a joint appointment as Swiss Bank Corporation Professor of International Management, INSEAD, Fontainebleau, France, which dates from 1985. He has served as a consultant to various government agencies, international institutions, banks and corporations, and has held a number of board memberships.

Dr. Walter's principal areas of academic and consulting activities include international trade policy, international banking, environmental economics, and economics of multinational corporate operations. He has published papers in various professional journals in these fields and is the author or editor of 21 books, the most recent of which is Universal Banking in the United States, published by Oxford University Press and co-authored with Prof. Anthony Saunders. At present, his interests focus on competitive structure, conduct, and performance in the international banking and financial services industry, as well as international trade and investment issues.
