

Reproduced from Collision Course: America & East Asia in the Past and the Future by Bryce Harland (Singapore: Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, 1996). This version was obtained electronically direct from the publisher on condition that copyright is not infringed. No part of this publication may be reproduced without the prior permission of the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies. Individual articles are available at < <http://bookshop.iseas.edu.sg> >

The Author

Bryce Harland is an independent writer now living in London. A member of New Zealand's foreign service from 1953 to 1991, he was his country's first ambassador to China, and he has continued to take an active interest in Asian affairs. Later he became Permanent Representative to the United Nations in New York. Until his retirement he served for five years as High Commissioner for New Zealand in London. Since then he has written two extended essays — "On Our Own: New Zealand in the Emerging Tripolar World" and "Asia: What Next?" — as well as a number of articles.