OPEN
UNIVERSITIES
An Asian Perspective

The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies was established as an autonomous organization in 1968. It is a regional research centre for scholars and other specialists concerned with modern Southeast Asia, particularly the multi-faceted problems of stability and security, economic development, and political and social change.

The Institute is governed by a twenty-two-member Board of Trustees comprising nominees from the Singapore Government, the National University of Singapore, the various Chambers of Commerce, and professional and civic organizations. A ten-man Executive Committee oversees day-to-day operations; it is chaired by the Director, the Institute's chief academic and administrative officer.

Acknowledgements

IT is with gratitude that I acknowledge the support of the Konrad Adenauer Foundation and the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies, Singapore, for this study which is based on three months of visiting some open universities and distance learning institutions to observe and learn from the experiences of those involved in this special mode of education. I hope some of these lessons can be applied in Asia.

This report is a presentation of the writer's observations and perceptions of what she observed and learnt on the study tour. It cannot by any stretch of the imagination be considered an expert report or a critique. It is the relating of the experiences of one who has been through a shower and perhaps ankle-deep floods when there are readers and experts who have had the experience of Noah and the great flood.
