Debating Democratization

IN MYANMAR

The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) was established as an autonomous organization in 1968. It is a regional centre dedicated to the study of socio-political, security and economic trends and developments in Southeast Asia and its wider geostrategic and economic environment. The Institute's research programmes are the Regional Economic Studies (RES, including ASEAN and APEC), Regional Strategic and Political Studies (RSPS), and Regional Social and Cultural Studies (RSCS).

ISEAS Publishing, an established academic press, has issued more than 2,000 books and journals. It is the largest scholarly publisher of research about Southeast Asia from within the region. ISEAS Publishing works with many other academic and trade publishers and distributors to disseminate important research and analyses from and about Southeast Asia to the rest of the world.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The March 2013 Myanmar/Burma Update conference was the biggest such conference since the Australian National University (ANU) held its first Burma Update in 1999. The conveners/editors are grateful to the Australian Agency for International Development (AusAID) for its generous financial support for the conference, for this publication of the conference papers, and for a follow-up policy workshop in 2014.

The Department of Political and Social Change, ANU College of Asia and the Pacific, has throughout shown unwavering support for the Update. We thank Andrew MacIntyre, the College Dean, Paul Hutchcroft, then Director of the School of International, Political and Strategic Studies, and Greg Fealy, the Head of the Department of Political and Social Change, for their encouragement and involvement. We especially appreciate the wise guidance of Ed Aspinall in organizing and running the conference, and in assisting the process of publication of the conference papers. Other staff at the College who deserve thanks for their assistance include Julie Fitzgibbon, Dan Striegl, and Allison Ley.

The editors wish to thank the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) in Singapore for agreeing once again to publish the conference papers. The editors also wish to thank Christine Wilson for her dedicated copy-editing and indexing assistance, and the ANU Cartographic and GIS Services for their assistance with maps for this publication.

The 2013 Update was the first to have a Burmese-language session, and the postgraduate students who participated in that event and helped out in numerous other ways over the duration of the conference have our special appreciation. We look forward to their participation in future events by way of conference presentations and papers, and to their involvement in the process of democratization in Myanmar.
