Living with Uncertainty

The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) was established as an autonomous organization in 1968. It is a regional centre dedicated to the study of socio-political, security and economic trends and developments in Southeast Asia and its wider geostrategic and economic environment.

The Institute's research programmes are the Regional Economic Studies (RES, including ASEAN and APEC), Regional Strategic and Political Studies (RSPS), and Regional Social and Cultural Studies (RSCS).

ISEAS Publishing, an established academic press, has issued more than 2,000 books and journals. It is the largest scholarly publisher of research about Southeast Asia from within the region. ISEAS Publications works with many other academic and trade publishers and distributors to disseminate important research and analyses from and about Southeast Asia to the rest of the world.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This book would not have been completed without the kind support of a number of people whom I came to know over the years since I started studying anthropology and Vietnam. Among them, Abito Ito, Takeo Funabiki, Shinji Yamashita, Michio Suenari, Moto Furuta, Mary Steedly, David Maybury-Lewis, James Watson, Hue-Tam Ho Tai, Hy Van Luong were some of the most helpful inspiring me with their comments and suggestions. Their ideas, advices and constructive critiques always guided me and helped me proceed with my project with positive perspectives.

My research in the Mekong Delta was realized with the great help of Masaki Kunieda, the former Japanese Consul-General in Ho Chi Minh City. I am grateful to Can Tho University, particularly to the former rector Tran Thuong Tuan for admitting me as their research fellow. Le Viet Dung, Dao Van Khanh, Pham Xuan Binh, and other staff members of the International Cooperation Office of the university were always helpful and tried to meet my demanding requests. Many faculty members befriended me and especially Tran Thi Phan always cared for me like a real sister.

The conduct of my research in Long Tuyen Village owed much to the provincial government of Can Tho Province and Can To City as well as Long Tuyen Village Committee. My greatest gratitude goes, however, to my host family. My host parents Nguyen Van Dau and Nguyen Thi Hon and their children and grandchildren welcomed a strange foreigner with such kindness and affections. I am always appreciative of their openness and friendliness. Besides the family members, Pham Thi Kim Lan and Dao Hiep enthusiastically assisted me to carry out my research.

My research in Vietnam was assisted by grants from a number of sources. Yamada Foundation and Nakatou Foundation, Mellon Funding from Harvard University, Matsushita International Foundation Research Scholarship and Asia Research Center Fellowship funded the first phase of the research. The second phase of the fieldwork was funded by Iwakuni Foundation Fellowship and Toyota Foundation Scholarship.

Ng Kok Kiong, the Managing Editor of ISEAS Publishing, and the editor Sheryl Sin Bing Peng, have been a supportive and patient guide, facilitating the completion of the book. Kalina Manova and Kathy Duffin proofread and edited my earlier draft very carefully and gracefully. A few friends, among whom is Fiona Miller, read pieces of my draft and gave me helpful comments. My conversations with John Kleinen, Charles MacDonald, Shaun Malarney, Ann Marie Leshkowich, Narquis Barak, Chihiro Miyazawa, Masao Kashinaga and Hiroko Furuya guided me to different issues and perspectives.

My final but deep thanks go to my parents Hisashi and Yumiko Owada, my elder sister Crown Princess Masako, and my twin sister Reiko Ikeda, whose love and support gave me the courage to continue even at the most difficult times. My husband Kenji Shibuya encouraged me to pursue my interest in people's lives in the rural Mekong Delta and always supported me with his strength and kindness.
