

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

ZHAO Hong is Senior Fellow at ISEAS–Yusof Ishak Institute, Singapore. Prior to joining the Institute, he was a senior research fellow at the East Asian Institute (EAI), National University of Singapore; a professor at the Research School of Southeast Asian Studies, Xiamen University, where he taught International Political Economy, Big Power Relations, and Southeast Asian Economy. His latest published book and papers include: China and India: The Quest for Energy Resources in the 21st Century (2012), “China’s Dilemma on Iran: Between Energy Security and a Big Responsible Country” (2014). His research mainly looks at the political economies of China, Southeast Asia, and South Asia; economic growth and energy security in Asia; Asia-Pacific regionalism and economic community.