ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The book is an outcome of the workshop “Contested Resource Frontiers in Mainland Southeast Asia” held in the ISEAS – Yusof Ishak Institute, Singapore on 6 March 2020 under its Regional Social and Cultural Studies (RSCS) Programme’s “China in Southeast Asia” Project. The editors wish to express their gratitude to former RSCS director Benjamin Loh and his team for making this event possible just before the COVID-19 pandemic put an end to academic life as we knew it. Thanks go to those participants of the workshop who could not join this publication project but whose insightful presentations and contributions to the discussions greatly helped us to shape our ideas on contested resource frontiers in Southeast Asia. Special thanks are reserved for new RSCS Coordinator Norshahril bin Saat for the untiring support of our publication project, Rainer Einzenberger (University of Vienna) for his helpful critical reading of the introduction chapter, and Charlotte Wagner for editorial support.

Oliver Tappe wishes to thank ISEAS for the kind hospitality and inspiring working atmosphere during his visiting fellowship in (pre-pandemic) Singapore. He also would like to acknowledge the support of his and other contributors’ research by the Competing Regional Integrations in Southeast Asia (CRISEA) interdisciplinary research programme, funded by the European Union’s Horizon 2020 Framework Programme.

Simon Rowedder wishes to express special thanks to the students at the National University of Singapore (NUS) who have attended his classes on Sino-Southeast Asian frontiers in the past couple of years. Their engaged debates and creative comments greatly contributed to the ideas developed in this book.
