The ISEAS – Yusof Ishak Institute (formerly Institute of Southeast Asian Studies) is an autonomous organization established in 1968. It is a regional centre dedicated to the study of socio-political, security, and economic trends and developments in Southeast Asia and its wider geostrategic and economic environment. The Institute's research programmes are grouped under Regional Economic Studies (RES), Regional Strategic and Political Studies (RSPS), and Regional Social and Cultural Studies (RSCS). The Institute is also home to the ASEAN Studies Centre (ASC), the Singapore APEC Study Centre, and the Temasek History Research Centre (THRC).

ISEAS Publishing, an established academic press, has issued more than 2,000 books and journals. It is the largest scholarly publisher of research about Southeast Asia from within the region. ISEAS Publishing works with many other academic and trade publishers and distributors to disseminate important research and analyses from and about Southeast Asia to the rest of the world.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

All the authors are grateful to all the participants and interviewees who gave up their time to share their experiences for this research project that started in 2017. We would also like to thank our Enlightened Myanmar Research Foundation (EMReF) colleagues for collecting and translating the data and assisting us with our analysis. While we wish to acknowledge each of them by name, it is not possible given the current climate of repression in Myanmar. Finally, we would like to acknowledge International Development Research Council (IDRC) of Canada for their generous funding of the research project and the writing of this book. And especial thanks to Dr Edgard Rodriguez for his encouragement and unwavering support of us and Myanmar's democracy.

ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Elin Bjarnegård is Associate Professor in Political Science at Uppsala University, Sweden. In the year 2020–21, she was a Fellow at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities and Social Sciences, where she worked on a book about gender politics in authoritarian states. Her research focuses on gender, political parties and conflict and has been published in journals such as Comparative Politics, Party Politics, Government & Opposition, Politics & Gender and Journal of Peace Research. She is the author of the book Gender, Informal Institutions and Political Recruitment: Explaining Male Dominance in Parliamentary Representation (2013).

Michelle Dion is a Professor of Political Science at McMaster University, Canada. Her research interests include three broad themes: the political economy of social policy in Latin America; sexuality, attitudes, and policy; and diversity, methodology, and the profession of political science. She is the author of Workers & Welfare (2010) and articles appearing in journals, including PLOS-One, Comparative Politics, and International Studies Quarterly, among others. She is also a co-editor of the American Political Science Review (2020–24).

Paul Minoletti completed a doctorate in Economic and Social History from the University of Oxford in 2011, and since 2012 has worked as a policy researcher in Myanmar. Paul has published on a range of political and economic topics in Myanmar, including gender and political participation, gender and budgeting, economics and conflict, fiscal decentralization and federalism, and public financial management.

Jangai Jap is an Early Career Provost Fellow at the University of Texas at Austin in the Department of Government and a Post-Doctoral Fellow in the Politics of Race and Ethnicity Lab. Her research interests focus on ethnic politics, nationalism, minority-state relations, civil war and Burma/Myanmar politics.

Cassandra Preece is a PhD candidate in Political Science (Comparative Public Policy) at McMaster University. She is a doctoral research fellow for McMaster's Ethnic Quota and Political Representation research project and is a 2020 SSHRC doctoral fellow. Her research interests include elections, ethnic minority representation, ethnic conflict, and political parties in the Asia Pacific.

La Ring Pausa was a Program Officer and researcher at Enlightened Myanmar Research Foundation (EMReF) in Yangon, Myanmar. La Ring has conducted research as a research project manager in the fields of socioeconomics, gender equality and media audiences across the country. He holds a Bachelor of Social Work from Martin Luther Christian University, MLCU Shillong, Northeast India, and Master of Arts in Social Science (Development Studies) from Chiang Mai University, Thailand.

Guillem Riambau is an Assistant Professor of Economics at Universitat de Barcelona, and member of the Barcelona Institute of Economics (IEB) and the Institute and Political Economy Research Center (IPERC). He received his PhD in Economics from Boston University in 2012 and holds a BA in Political Science (2001) and a BA in Economics (2005) from the Universitat Autònoma de Barcelona.

Netina Tan is a University Fellow and Associate Professor of Political Science at McMaster University, Canada. Her work focuses on authoritarian resilience, digital democracy and political representation of women and ethnic minorities. Her work has appeared in Democratization, Election Law Journal, Electoral Studies, Politics and Gender, Representation, Pacific Affairs, among others.

Aye Lei Tun is a PhD student in Political Science (Comparative Public Policy) at McMaster University, Canada. She holds a Master of Development Practices degree (2015) from the University of Queensland in Australia and a Master of Gender, Human Rights and Conflict Studies degree (2016) from the International Institute of Social Studies. She was the Senior Gender Program Manager with the Enlightened Myanmar Research Foundation in Yangon.

Anor Mu is a national research consultant working for national and international bodies in Myanmar. She was awarded her bachelor's degree in Population Studies from Yangon University of Economics in 2005 and her master's degree in 2007.

Meredith Weiss is Professor of Political Science in the Rockefeller College of Public Affairs and Policy at the University at Albany, State University of New York, U.S.A. Her research addresses social mobilization and civil society, the politics of identity and development, parties and elections, institutional reform, and subnational governance in Southeast Asia, with particular focus on Malaysia and Singapore.
