ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

The breadth and depth of the chapters in this book testify to the collective effort and industry of multiple contributors. This project germinated in the middle of 2021, when Covid-19 infections were resurging and starkly reminding us that the pandemic was far from over after one and a half years. Similarities and differences in Southeast Asia had also emerged, and data were becoming more available, sparking interest in a regionwide inquiry with country-specific and comparative elements. Literature on Covid-19 had also been published by then, providing empirical investigation and policy analysis amid the unfolding crises. To make an original and substantive contribution, we formulated thematic trios of Southeast Asian country studies to give each chapter a focus and to facilitate more cohesive inter-country comparison, as explained in Chapter 1.

This work progressed under the banner of the ISEAS – Yusof Ishak Institute’s Regional Economic Studies (RES) programme, for which we thank RES Coordinator Cassey Lee. ISEAS Director and CEO, Choi Shing Kwok, and Director of the Research Division and Deputy CEO, Terence Chong, gave valuable support and encouragement. Between October 2021 and February 2022, we held a webinar series at which authors presented conceptual frameworks and preliminary findings. Research papers were presented at a 28–29 July 2022 conference at ISEAS. We thank discussants Sanchita Basu Das and Dean Dulay for providing incisive and constructive feedback on the draft papers presented, and conference moderators and participants for lively and fruitful interactions.

The July 2022 conference was the first international hybrid event organized by ISEAS after the wide reopening of cross-border travel. We are hugely indebted to Foo Chen Nee, Nurul Iffah Johar, Daron Hoon and Lee Ling Ling for their administrative and logistical support, which made the conference an enjoyable and seamless affair despite the many challenges. We thank ISEAS interns Hafiz Nasruddin, Koh Jun Ming and Ang Tze Xin for their assistance with data sourcing and various project tasks.

This project's team of contributors channelled their expertise, empirical research and policy analyses into the chapters that form this volume. We extend our hearty gratitude to them for coming on board the project and investing time and effort into producing twelve informative, insightful and engaging country studies, and two studies with regional scope. We hope that the comparative synthesis essays we have written do justice to their work.

We are grateful to Katherine Demopoulos for her sharp and meticulous copyediting, which refined the manuscript. Our ISEAS Publishing colleagues, especially Ng Kok Kiong and Rahilah Yusuf, ensured that the final product lives up to ISEAS's high standards.

Konrad Adenauer Stiftung (KAS) provided financial support for the July 2022 conference and for publishing expenses, without which this book would not have been possible. We thank KAS for their generosity.
