

About the Contributors

Martin Gainsborough

He is a Lecturer in South East Asian Politics at the School of Oriental and African Studies, United Kingdom, holds a PhD from the University of London, and published Changing Political Economy of Vietnam: The Case of Ho Chi Minh City (London and New York: Routledge, 2003) among other writings.

Martin Grossheim

He is an assistant professor, Department of Southeast Asian History and Society, Humboldt University, Berlin. His PhD is from the University of Passau in Germany. His book on continuities and changes in Vietnamese communities is Nordvietnamesische Dorfgemeinschaften: Kontinuität und Wandel (Hamburg, Mitteilungen des Instituts für Asienkunde, 1997).

Natalie Hicks

She is a development consultant in Cambodia and a PhD candidate at the Australian National University. In 2002 she finished two years of research in the Mekong Delta and is now writing a dissertation on rural local government in Long An province.

Benedict J. Tria Kerkvliet

A professor at the Australian National University, he recently finished a book manuscript on agrarian politics in Vietnam. He also does research on the Philippines and peasant politics in Asia.

David Koh

He has a PhD from the Australian National University, has conducted in-depth research and published on politics and government in Hanoi, and is currently a fellow at the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies in Singapore.

Edmund Malesky

After lengthy research in Vietnam, he completed a PhD dissertation at Duke University, USA, on the impact of foreign direct investment on provincial-central relations in Vietnam. He will spend a year as a Harvard Academy Fellow before starting his academic career at University of California-San Diego in the Fall of 2005.

David G. Marr

A well-known scholar on Vietnam, he is an Emeritus Professor at the Australian National University. His book Vietnam 1945: The Quest for Power (Berkeley: University of California Press, 1995) won the John Fairbank prize from the American Historical Association.

Pham Quang Minh

Now teaching in the College of Social Sciences and Humanities, Vietnam National University-Hanoi, he has a PhD in history of Southeast Asia from Humboldt University. His published dissertation on agrarian politics in northern Vietnam since 1945 is Zwischen Theorie und Praxis: Agrarpolitik in Vietnam seit 1945 (Berlin: Berliner Südostasien-Studien, 2003).

Thomas Sikor

After finishing his PhD at the University of California-Berkeley, he returned to Germany where he does research at Humboldt University, Berlin. He has published on agrarian and environmental change in Vietnam and Eastern Europe.

Tran Thi Thu Trang

A graduate of universities in Vietnam and England, she is now a PhD candidate at the Institute of Social Studies in The Hague, Netherlands, where she is writing a dissertation on rural diversification and differentiation in Vietnam.

Truong Huyen Chi

Holding a PhD in anthropology from the University of Toronto, she teaches at Vietnam National University-Hanoi and the National Center for Social Sciences and Humanities in Hanoi. She has done extensive research on rural society in northern Vietnam, has published some of her findings, and has made presentations to international conferences.