

About the Author

J. Soedradjad Djiwandono is Emeritus Professor of Economics, the University of Indonesia, and Visiting Professor at the Institute of Defence and Strategic Studies (IDSS), Nanyang Technological University (NTU), Singapore. Previously he was a Visiting Senior Fellow, the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS), Singapore, and a Development Associate at the Harvard Institute for International Development (HIID), Harvard University, USA. He started his career as a researcher at the Institute of Economics and Social Research, Council for Sciences of Indonesia (LIPI) and ultimately lecturer and professor at the Faculty of Economics, the University of Indonesia. However, he also has had a long career in the government of Indonesia, working in different capacities, including Bureau Head in the National Development Planning Agency (Bappenas), Special Assistant to the Minister of Trade, and Assistant Minister Coordinator for Economics, Finance and Industry. He has also held cabinet posts in the Soeharto government, notably a five-year term as the Junior Minister of Trade and another five-year term as Governor of Bank Indonesia, Indonesia's central bank. Dr. Djiwandono earned a BA in Economics from Gajah Madah University (1963), and MSc in Economics (1966) from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, an MA in Political Economy (1978), and a PhD in Economics (1980) from Boston University, specializing in Monetary Economics, International Trade and Development Economics.