The Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) was established as an autonomous organization in 1968. It is a regional centre dedicated to the study of socio-political, security and economic trends and developments in Southeast Asia and its wider geostrategic and economic environment.

The Institute's research programmes are the Regional Economic Studies (RES, including ASEAN and APEC), Regional Strategic and Political Studies (RSPS), and Regional Social and Cultural Studies (RSCS).

ISEAS Publishing, an established academic press, has issued more than 2,000 books and journals. It is the largest scholarly publisher of research about Southeast Asia from within the region. ISEAS Publishing works with many other academic and trade publishers and distributors to disseminate important research and analyses from and about Southeast Asia to the rest of the world.

The Hiroshima Peace Institute (HPI) was established in April 1998 as a publicly funded research institute affiliated with the Hiroshima City University. The HPI engages in a variety of research activities relating to peace, inspired by the city's historical experience of being devastated by a nuclear weapon. Consequently, the HPI is devoted to the realization of peace through research and outreach activities to the local and international societies. Special attention is paid to the abolition of nuclear weapons and issues of conflict within and between countries in the Asia Pacific region. Contributions to global peace research are undertaken through public lectures, symposia, academic workshops, and scholarly publications.

This edited volume is the outcome of two workshops convened at the Hiroshima Peace Institute in March and October 2005. Most of the chapter contributors were commissioned on the basis of their availability and expertise to contribute to the project. The workshops were in turn part of a larger project entitled the “Myanmar Peace Initiative” that was wholly funded by the institute through the Hiroshima City Government. We are extremely grateful to both the institute and the local government for the generous funding of the project. Additionally, partial funding for a closing dinner during the first workshop was generously provided by the Singapore-based Konrad Adenauer Stiftung. We are also deeply grateful to Dr Colin Duerkop for his assistance and interest in funding projects related to Myanmar.

Naturally, there are numerous individuals to whom we owe an immense debt of gratitude. Professors David Steinberg and Robert Taylor were the senior scholars anchoring the project. There were an equally able number of indigenous scholars who assisted us with the project. In this regard we are especially thankful to Alan Saw Oo, Ja Nan Lahtaw and Sai Kham Mong for their contributions, as we are to Tin Maung Maung Than as the senior native scholar. Vincent Boudreau, Rachel Safman and Khin Zaw Win attended to our request for participation in the project at rather short notice.

Finally, we are deeply indebted to the administrative and support staff at the Hiroshima Peace Institute for their patience and skill in attending to the needs of the conference participants. We are especially grateful to Miki Nomura and Michiko Yoshimoto who assisted with various aspects of administration. President Motofumi Asai and the research staff have also been supportive of the publication of this volume under the joint auspices of the Institute of Southeast Asian Studies and the Hiroshima Peace Institute. From ISEAS, we are equally grateful to Triena Ong who expressed an early interest in the publication of this volume.
