

About the Author

Robin Bush is The Asia Foundation's Country Representative in Indonesia where she leads the Foundation's extensive governance, civil society, democracy, economic and business policy reform programs. Prior to becoming the Country Representative in November 2008, Bush was the Deputy Country Representative from 2006–08. From 2002–2006 Bush served as the Foundation's Director for Islam and Development programs, responsible for developing and implementing civil society, education, and anti-poverty programs in collaboration with Muslim organizations. Robin Bush has been with the Foundation since 1998, when she joined its Indonesia office as a Program Officer for the Islam and Civil Society program.

Robin Bush holds a PhD in political science from the University of Washington and an MA in International Studies from Ohio University. She is also the author of numerous articles on politics and Islam in Indonesia. Bush has lived in Indonesia for over 20 years.

August 2008